Life rafts involved

BFA marine (*) has identified some overpressure valves failures on life rafts in use, which may lead to a major air leakage when cracked or even to a complete deflation of the compartment when broken.

In the event both overpressure valves of the 2 independent compartments would happen to break, the life raft will not be functional anymore and be useless.

As a preventive measure, BFA marine urges its owners to bring back, without delay, their life raft to the nearest BFA approved service station, in order to check and potentially replace those overpressure valves.

The valve replacement will be free of charge. This is yet your responsibility to bring the life raft to the service station for inspection.

Please contact us if you need any help to select the adequate station.
In the event you may have condemned or sold the life raft, we would be grateful to inform us by return, and provide the buyer address.

This corrective action does not affect, neither the recommended servicing schedule, nor the warranty period.

We apologize for the inconvenience, and remain at your disposal for any enquiry you may have.
