

Energy and the Environment

Our use of transport has many impacts on our environment. Transport consumes energy, depleting our natural resources. Transport is responsible for the emission of greenhouse gases which contribute to climate change, and air pollutants which impact air quality. Noise from transport also causes disturbance, with aircraft noise being a key contributor. This section presents statistics on all these areas.

E-mail: publicationgeneral.enq@dft.gov.uk for more information about the data, surveys and publications.

TSGB 2007 Chapter 3: Notes and definitions (1 Mb)

Published:

31 October 2007

TSGB 2007 Chapter 3: Energy and the environment - data tables (735 kb)

Published:

31 October 2007

Last update:

16 January 2008

TSGB 2007 Chapter 3: Energy and the environment - data tables (199 kb)

Published:

31 October 2007

For related documents, pages and internet links, see the column on the right.