UK Airports where the one bag restriction no longer applies

The Department for Transport has approved new security arrangements at a number of airports in the UK. This means that at these airports the restriction previously imposed limiting hand baggage to one item per person no longer applies. However, airlines and airports may apply their own operational policies governing the number of items of hand baggage.

Before departing we strongly suggest you check with your airline and airport on the cabin baggage arrangements for your particular journey.
