Dear

FREEDOM OF INFORMATION ACT 2000

I refer to your letter of 2nd April 2009 concerning drivers hours and Tachograph Guides published on our website. You said that in the guide on tacho rules for goods vehicles has changed in relation to weekly rest requirements. Also that until recently there was an example of a driver taking two reduced weekly rest periods one after the other.

There has been no change to Council Regulation (EC) 561/2006 regarding Article 8 (daily and weekly rest requirements). The view of VOSA regarding the legislation has not changed in that it is believed that a driver may take two consecutive reduced weekly rest periods. However, in two consecutive weeks, a driver must take at least two regular weekly rest periods or one regular weekly rest period and one reduced weekly rest period. It should be noted that only a Court may interpret the meaning of legislation. To date we are not aware of any 'stated cases' that apply to this Regulation.

Nothing has changed in legislation or interpretation. The diagram was amended to show the working custom of the majority of drivers, effectively, Monday to Friday with occasional Saturday overtime. Although the preamble of the Regulation is quite clear in that the reference to a 'fixed week' does not preclude the driver from starting their 'working week' on any day in the fixed week. Producing guides to drivers hours legislation is both difficult and time consuming. The guide is written with the aim of providing a concise, yet comprehensive explanation of the relevant legislation. It is not possible to cover every eventuality or permutation that a driver / operator may come across.

A recent Commission Decision has allowed for daily and weekly rest requirements to be delayed for members of the Reserve Forces who are also full time HGV/PSV drivers. This relaxation of the time constraints contained in the Regulation has been published in the commercial press. In addition, the details have been communicated to Traffic Examiners. It should be noted that the relaxation applies to the requirement to attend an annual training exercise, usually of a two week duration and ten weekend training exercises, distributed throughout the training year.
